acceligence welcomes people-first enterprise transformation leader Michael Yadgar as Executive Advisor

News

January 20, 2026

Category: company news

Tags: enterprise applications, erp, executive advisor, strategy, technology

We are excited to welcome Michael Yadgar as an Executive Advisor at acceligence.

Michael brings more than 30 years of experience driving innovation, growth, and operational excellence across Fortune 500 organizations. As a former partner and practice leader at both Accenture and EY, he helped shape some of the most complex global modernization programs in the industry, advising C-suites and boards through critical transformation programs.

As EY's Americas SAP Leader, Michael architected and scaled one of the world's most successful global SAP practices, spearheading EY's strategic partnership with SAP and elevating the firm into the top tier of SAP ecosystem partners. His work helped EY clients reshape go-to-market models, enable enterprise-wide modernization, and directly connect technology investment to business strategy.

What sets Michael apart is his people-first approach to transformation. He is known for scaling complex businesses across geographies and industries while cultivating leadership cultures grounded in empathy, trust, and transparency. Michael's colleagues describe the long-lasting impact on his teams' careers:

"Michael is not only a tremendous leader and people developer, but is also a role model to many. He treats everyone with respect and dignity."

…and go on to note that…

"Michael is an unbelievable leader. He leads with strength, and at the forefront is his caring for the individual."

As a trusted advisor to boards, CEOs, and CFOs, Michael has guided organizations through large-scale modernization, M&A integration, and performance transformation. His client experience ranges from consolidating dozens of ERP systems across a $50B industrial manufacturer to helping a high-growth ag-tech company establish its digital foundation post-IPO.

As an Executive Advisor, Michael will work closely with acceligence clients and leadership teams on enterprise transformation strategy, technology-enabled operating models, and board-level oversight of complex modernization initiatives. His perspective strengthens our ability to help leaders navigate change with rigor, foresight, and humanity.

We’re thrilled to welcome Michael to the acceligence Executive Advisor team and look forward to the impact he will have on our clients, our leadership conversations, and the work ahead.

Read more about Michael, and please join us in welcoming him to the team!